Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Wednesday 20 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Mild, wet and windy today. Turning colder tomorrow.

Today:
A mild day in store with outbreaks of rain and drizzle, heavy at times particularly over higher ground. Occasional drier spells are possible, but it will remain mostly cloudy and windy. Mild across all parts. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Winds easing for a time during the evening but remaining wet with further pulses of often heavy rain. Becoming colder and windier again at the end of the night. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Thursday:
Outbreaks of rain, with possible hill snow for the Peak District will clear early Thursday. Thereafter, sunny spells and scattered showers and remaining windy and bitterly cold. Maximum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Cold and breezy on Friday but mainly dry with sunny spells. Less windy over the weekend and generally dry although scattered wintry showers possible. Widespread frost overnight.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.